PAN-AMERICAN EXHIBIT

SPECIAL COMMISSIONER RUCKER NOW IN THE CITY.

The Commercial Club, by Resolution Decides to Urge Legislature to Make Appropriation.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Commercial Club resolutions were passed commending the project of holding the pan-American exposition at Buffalo, N. Y., and pledging itself to do all in its power to secure an appropriation from the Legislature at its next session, that the State may be properly represented at the exposi-

In a communication addressed by H. P. Rucker, special commissioner of the exposition, who is here, to President Coffin, he states that for the first time in history the republics of North and South America, together with the Dominion of Canada, the adjacent islands of Cuba and Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines only will take part in the exposition. "The magnitude of the exposition," said Mr. Rucker, "may to a certain extent be appreciated when it is understood that one of its chief purposes is to illustrate the progress in art, manufacture and agriculture of the last century in the states and countries of the western hemisphere." The pan-American exposition will furnish an opportunity to widen the field of operation and extend the lines of trade between North and South America. A United States board of managers has been organized and a special commission appointed, charged with the duty of providing unique and instructive exhibits from the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Alaska and the island of Guam. In June, 1899, the national government at Washington issued nvitations to the foreign nations of the western hemisphere to participate in the exposition, and official acceptances have een received from Canada, Mexico and from all the Central and South American ics, save three or four. A large numher of the commercial organizations of the United States have passed resolutions strongly suporting the idea and purpose of

Exchanged Stolen Goods.

Jacob Emden, of 210 North Noble street, a clerk at Selig's clothing store, on South Illinois street, was arrested yesterday by Detectives Gerber and Lancaster on a charge of grand larceny. The arrest is the result of the arrest of Henry Goegel and Edwin Fry, employes of the H. P. Was-son store, and the finding of a letter which, it is said, shows a conspiracy whereby stolen goods were exchanged.

Alkhorn's Death Occurs. Fleming Alkhorn, of Acton, who was shot early Sunday morning by Jenks Swails, who was arrested and lodged in jail here, died early yesterday morning from his injuries. Swalls insists his shooting of Alkhorn was solely in self-defense and says he has no fear of trial on the charge of murder, which has been made, though regretting the death of Alkhorn.

ing at the Hall.

JOHN G. WOOLLEY THE ATTRACTION AT NIGHT MEETING.

Hall-General Tenor of the Speeches.

The Prohibitionists held meetings all day yesterday. The first event took place at 10:30 o'clock in the morning at Tomlinson Hall, when B. F. Watson presided as chairman. There were a number of addresses and one of the features of this meeting was the vocal music of the Archi-AN OLD BOILER EXPLODED bald brothers, of Morocco. The opening hymn was "America," sung by the audience. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. G. Proctor, pastor of the Lincoln-avenue M. E. Church. Miss Thorp gave a solo, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

In his remarks as chairman, B. F. Watson explained that the chilly condition of the hall was perhaps due to the frost that characterized the convention of Democratic clubs last week. Among the speakers were R. H. Clark, of Evansville, Prohibition candidate for lieutenant governor. Mr. Clark is one of the five veterans on the Prohibition state ticket. There was also a short talk by Edward W. > At 1 o'clock the state executive committee held a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. General plans for carrying on the campaign were discussed and it was decided to make an especially strong fight by means of literature. At 2 o'clock another audience assembled in Tomlinson Hall to hear more speeches. Dr. H. J. Hall, of Franklin, chairman of the state committee, was the presiding chairman. There was a speech by J. S. Hughes, of Chicago, who formerly lived in Indiana, and who once ran for Governor on the Prohibition ticket. The principal address of the afternoon was made by M. W. Harkins, of Anderthe engineer and he said he had just put

Woolley, the Prohibition candidate for President, would be the next chief executive of the country. Other speeches of the afternoon were by Charles Eckhart, candidate for Governor; M. B. McKenzle, candidate for auditor of state, and L. T. Van Cleave, district evangelist from the Ninth district. Mr. Eckhart spoke with some difficulty on account of the condition of his voice. Before the afternoon meeting closed C. E. Newlin announced that it had been decided to establish a Prohibition newspaper in Chicago to be known as the Daily Voice. For some time there has been talk of establishing this paper, but those who had it in charge were uncertain as to whether or not it would be a successful venture. They have now concluded to go ahead with the

The special train bearing the Prohibition national candidates arrived from Greencastle about 5 o'clock yesterday evening, and from here made a run to Martinsville. McWhirter spoke briefly and introduced Samuel Dickie, of Albion, Mich., former national chairman. He spoke first with a buggy at Meridian and Morris streets and tore off one of the buggy wheels, but the accident resulted in no of the importance of the work which the Prohibitionists are seeking to accomplish, following this by saying that the question of prohibition was rightfully in politics. Altman said the explosion was no sur-prise to him as he had known for some time He said in part: "It is clearly of a political character. We must have the championship of some party, and not the Re-publican or Democratic parties, either. No it had been recently cleaned and that the party which will court the saloon before the election will destroy the saloon after the election. The Prohibitionists did not take the saloon into politics. We found it there. We had to take it where we found it intrenched." His first reference to the candidates of the great parties was when he spoke of Roosevelt as "the terrible Teddy, the hoodoo of the Republican party, who talks too much." This he followed by a statement that whichever party elected At the meeting of the Methodist ministers its ticket "there will be no foe to the saloon in the vice presidential chair." The closing portion of his speech was devoted to the army canteen, in which he attempted to show that all those of the present adon "Prison Study." The statement that ministration followed in dealing with the question the dictates of liquor interests. since the enactment of the parole law 717 Dickie was followed by Wilson S. Whittier or that of Teddy Roosevelt on a bucking broncho?" His remarks about voting upon conviction and his appeal to young men brought some applause but there was little evidence of enthusiasm following his remarks about the retention of

And then came the speaker of the evening, John G. Woolley. He began with the statement that his veins contained Quaker blood which could be traced for 250 years, after which he mildly told of what, in his opinion, the true greatness of any government consisted, coming gradually to the government of this country by the Democrats and Republicans. Then began an ronical denunciation of the two parties, the principles advocated by each, the representatives of the parties who have occupied the highest office of governthe leaders of the parties, their followers and the methods and motives of each until his listeners in wonderment, almost forgot to applaud when he made some remarks appealing strongly to the enthusiasm of his sympathetic hearers. His sentences were long, so long that but few could follow them with understanding, and were made up principally of cutting, jeering, sarcastic adjectives and phrases, the use of which has seldom been equaled outside of the periodical, the publication of which resulted in the death of Brann, of Texas iconoclastic fame.

Among other things he said: "The President's policy conforms like the bark of measures it to follow the spiritual circumference of the system of which he is an almost perfect flower. I do not believe that he is set in his mind to do any wrong thing, but by profession, by long habit, he has been trained to do the pleasure of a constituency whose spiritual normal is not health, but is well-nourished disease. He could not do right and be re-elected. But that is not his fault. He says: 'Seek ye first re-election and a good moral workable character, and then trust to luck that all these other things may be annexed.'

"He is not a prophet. He could not be a prophet. A prophet is a man who believes something—who believes it all the time who believes it so hard as to be crucified for his opinion. * * * I do not say that either one of these parties is dishonest. They are honest enough, but catering to ideals that are not high enough for the FOR PRESIDENT Christian mankind of this Nation. The Republican party is fairly true to the capi-talist, and the other parties are fairly true to the cause they follow. Concluding, he said: "The Republican party says you shall not debase the currency of the country. The Democratic party says you shall not diminish the currency of the country. The Prohibition party says you shall not sell the conscience of a man.' The meeting closed with a short talk by Volney T. Cushing, who had finished his speech on the outside of the hall. There was some after-enthusiasm, enough to induce the enthusiasts to buy all the Woolley buttons on the stand of a street vendor who was stationed at the door with

The Delegates Discussed Time of Holding a Concert.

Central Labor Union started off last night with a very mild tone, but after the routine of business, matters came up that turned the whole body into a room full of active humanity. Editor Gould, of the Union, bore the brunt of the first discussion, the lifting of a boycott on Kingan's packing establishment was the second bone of contention, and the last, which brought all the orators of Central Labor Union upon the floor with their argumentative talents, was the proposition to give a concert on Sunday before the election for the benefit of the central body.

Edgar A. Perkins, president of the State Federation of Labor, after the first-named discussions had been disposed of, moved that a concert be given in Tomlinson Hall the first Sunday in November. He jocosely added that he thought it would be a greater financial success then than on the second Sunday. This was appreciated for a gan to assert themselves. Some of the delegates said it was a scheme to "sandbag" politicians out of their money, and thought the act below the dignity of Centrai Labor Union. For a long time the matter was argued pro and con, as if it were one of much weight. Amendments galore were made until the final status of he motion, as it was put for adoption, was that the matter should be left in the hands of a special committee with discretionary power to decide whether the entertainment hould be a ball or concert.

Thus the motion passed, but when President Blue began to appoint the committee no one wanted to serve. This resulted in a motion to reconsider. It was carried and then there was another argument. Finally, Perkins moved to table it, which was done with one dissenting vote. The fight made against Editor Gould started because the trustees recommended that his bill for furnishing the Union to the local unions of the city be paid, and the contract be discontinued. It was said the secretaries of the unions did not receive the paper, and his policy was not approved. He was charged with being a single taxer and mixing his politics. The editor defended himself, aided by about half of the delegates, and it was finally voted to let the contract stand, but a censor would laced over his press. The matter of lifting the boycott off of Kingan's is of long standing. It was argued that the Coopers' Union, which first placed the boycott on the company and at whose instance it was indorsed by the central body, is no more, and that it had never tried to enforce it. State Labor Commissioner McCormack said there had been a misunderstanding in the matter from the start. He said the beycott did not properly belong on Kingan's, as the coopers were striking at a firm from which Kingan's bought barrels, and the boycott should have been placed upon this company instead of the packing company. Several other unions have grievances against Kingan's, and with the lifting of the boycott a committee was appointed to visit the firm and adjust matters.

John B. Hollenbeck, a government meat inspector at Kingan & Co.'s, was struck by a Central-avenue street car about 5 o'clock last evening on Massachusetts avenue near New Jersey street and probably fatally injured. He was taken to the City Hospital, after being treated temporarily at Mrs. Arnold's, 310 Massachusetts avenue, where he was carried after the accident. He had a deep gash on the right side of the head above the ear and his skull was fractured. Hollenbeck was riding a bicycle and crossed the track in front of the car, which
